WEDNESDAY EVENING OCT. 17, 1894

SCALDED A LIVING PICTURE.-T. e audience at Keith's Theatre, Boston, on Saturday evening witnessed the scalding of Miss Annie Strathmore, one of the living pictures on exhibition at the theatre. Miss Strathmore was one of the girls who pose in the fountain picture entitled, "The Birth of the Pearl," the last but one on the list.

In it the two front corners are occupied by girls half ensconced in mer-maids' tails, while back of them Mis-Strathmore stands fronting the audience, her arms bent upward and backward, crasping a sea shell above her head. The is clad only in flashings and a light undervest.

As the curtains part the forntain streams rise, the water fall ng all over her body. Of course, it is necessary that the water should be at least lukewarm, so a pipe of hoiling water waconnected with the cold stream. The sicture had been running six weekwithout a hitch. On Saturday evening, however, in ome way the flow had scarcely been urned on when the cold stream was turned off. Miss Strathmore felt the water growing botter, but bravely re sisted the impulse to cry out. Finally, driven frantic by the score of scalding streams, she screamed, and the curtains were quickly drawn. Many of the audience realized that there had been a serious accident, but few guessed the truth, as the affair was quickly hushed. A doctor of the Boston Emergency Hospital, near by was quickly called. He found that the young woman was severely burne about the feet and ankles and less bac ly on the body and shoulders.
